

Mey-ling Perez

BOOK AUTHOR

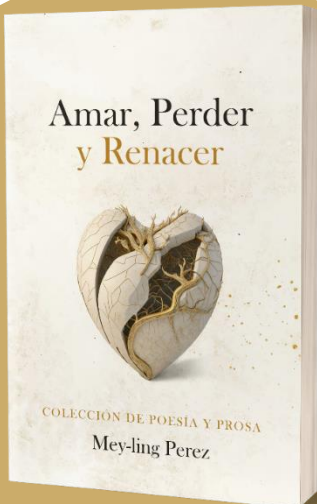

BIOGRAPHY

Mey-ling Perez was born in a small town near Havana, Cuba. The reality of growing up in a country cut off from the world, led her to use her imagination as a form of escape. Writing her first story at the early age of seven years old. Mey-ling immigrated to Miami in 1994, where she ultimately pursued a career in finance. She found a way back to writing by publishing various business-related articles, in publications such as the Miami Herald and the South Florida Legal Guide. Banker by day, but always in love with literature. This, her first book, will awaken the senses of the reader and revive memories of romance, loss, and triumphs.

ABOUT THE BOOK

"Amar, Perder, y Renacer" is a collection of poetry and prose filled with rich literary images that take the reader through three stages of the human condition, Love, Loss, and Rebirth. Throughout the poetry there are hopes, shattered dreams and eventually a strong realization of personal power. This book is for everyone who gave their heart away, lost a little piece in the process and survived stronger than ever.

The Japanese art of Kintsugi, the inspiration for the cover, proves that even after an object breaks, its value can exponentially increase. In this same fashion, the human heart can shine ever so brightly after difficult experiences and life lessons.
